Science and Human Progress

Science is a wonderful thing and is the main factor of man's progress in all fields. Without science, we would not enjoy the lifestyle that we are living now. Two of the main fields where science has helped people are health and food.

Science has improved health standards all over the world. Because of the progress in science, people now live much longer than before. There is a cure for a large number of diseases known to man. In fact, some diseases, such as smallpox, have now been completely eradicated. People are no longer afraid of getting sick, as they know that they can get good treatment at hospitals.

With the help of science, food is now easier to grow. Poor soil can be improved with the help of fertilisers. Farmers have a choice of using organic fertilisers, such as manure, or chemical fertilisers. The increase in crops is also due to the discovery of pesticides which are used to get rid of pests, especially insects. As a result, the incidence of food shortage is decreasing.

Science is being used more and more for human benefit and progress. We should all be grateful to scientists who are greatly responsible for our comfortable way of life.
